

SCOTLAND

Early Career Network & AGI Scotland joint event

Adding extra layers to your Career Map

4 May 2023

Our third career event is returning this year, and it will be the first in-person event in five years! As we all know, the pandemic has altered the way we work and has had a significant impact on job seekers, including those in the geospatial sector. GIS has gained more prominence, however, and its usefulness in facilitating remote work is now widely recognised. This may have prompted many job seekers to reconsider their priorities and choices. Your career path does not have to be linear, zigzagging is acceptable too.

The pandemic is not the only factor driving this change; growing interest in AI and other data science fields, as well as GIS use cases, make it necessary to embrace these areas instead of separating ourselves from them. Our event featured inspirational and practical tips from knowledgeable professionals in the geospatial and data science industries, and assisted attendees in crafting a CV that would increase their chances of landing their ideal job.

Presentations from the event;

Gillian Dick	View Presentation
Mel Marochov	View Presentation
Liam Mason	View Presentation
Hugh McMichael	View Presentation